“Gold has been woven into the tapestry of human history for thousands of years. It has weathered all sorts of social upheavals and crises, and to this day its preciousness has made it a store of value around the world. At a time when even the financial benchmark that is the US dollar is slowly losing its dominance, when the interests of major powers are clashing in such a fierce way, and we are experiencing profound social and technological change, any safe portfolio should include gold,” says Petr Špičák, IBIS InGold's marketing director.

IBIS InGold gives its clients the chance to invest in precious metals with the utmost flexibility. It is up to customers how much money they wish to transfer to their gold reserve and when, with no hidden fees. Plus, iiplanRentier® offers them the opportunity to be paid a regular annuity and reap the fruits of their investment on a continuous and long-term basis.

“We value the trust our clients and business partners place in us. We are keen to continue improving our products so that gold is used to its maximum potential,” adds Petr Špičák.

He believes that gold is an important asset to hold in a portfolio. It is particularly effective as a means of diversifying risk and reducing the implications of inflation, which is at the highest it has been in years. Investing in gold plainly makes good sense.
